

MILITARY RIVALRY

China expands amphibious forces in challenge to US beyond Asia

REUTERS Hong Kong, July 20

CHINA LAUNCHED ITS military build-up in the mid-1990s with a top priority: keep the United States at bay in any conflict by making the waters off the Chinese coast a death trap.

China's shipyards have launched the PLA Navy's first two Type 075 amphibious assault ships, which will form the spearhead of an expeditionary force to play a role similar to that of the US Marine Corps.

The first Type 075 was launched last September and the second in April, according to reports in China's official military media.

The 40,000-tonne Type 075 ships are a kind of small aircraft carrier with accommodation for up to 900 troops and space for heavy equipment and landing craft.

Eventually, the PLA Navy could have seven or more of these ships, according to reports in China's official military press.

Chinese military commentators quoted in official media say China's shipyards are now building and launching amphibious ships so rapidly it is like 'dropping dumplings' into water.

The military rivalry between China and the United States is only growing sharper. Last week, US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo declared most of Beijing's claims of sovereignty in the South China Sea illegal, throwing Washington's weight behind the rival claims of Southeast Asian nations over territory and resources in the strategic waterway that were supported by international law.
